We shall not forget "Dick" soon, and we wish him success in the future.

PHYLLIS TURNER

ARTHUR JOSEPH YOBST

"Art"

Intramural basketball (2, 3); Football (2); Year Book Committee (4).

JAMES ROBERT YOUNG, JR.

"Jimmie"

Band (2, 3, 4).

"Jimmy" left us mid-term "for better things," namely the United States Naval School of Music where we all know he will become a great trumpet player. As music has always been his highlight in school, we are all looking forward to the day we can say, "We knew him when."

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

PARENTS, Teachers, and Friends:

On behalf of the Class of 1941 I wish to extend to you a hearty welcome to our Class Day Exercises. We are gathered here to hear different members of the class, each of whom is worthy of the honor conferred on him. The speakers have shown their ability in the classroom, have been chosen by the faculty, or have been selected through competition.

To our parents and teachers goes a lot of credit. Our parents, who have guided us, and our teachers, who have educated us, will forever be our best friends. I wish to extend a great deal of gratitude and respect to all the teachers of Greenfield High School for their eager advice, friendliness, and devotion. We deeply appreciate all that they have done for us.

Classmates:

During the past three years, we as a group have been broken up into smaller groups, mainly through varied interests. Each person has had a personal liking, and it is to this liking that he or she turns when making a choice. We have all chosen different vocations, and it is in high school that we have started on our vocations. Whatever we may have chosen, wherever this choice has led us, we have made friends. Throughout life let us keep making friends, and let us never forget the emblem upon which our motto — Loyalty, Honor, and Scholarship — is engraved. Whenever we make new friends, let us remember those three words.

I wish to thank you, classmates, for electing me to represent you during the past three years. I have enjoyed doing what little I may have done. I think that all the credit should go to you for your eager spirit of cooperation, especially this last year when things looked dark.

In closing, I wish to leave with you the thought that is in a little prayer.

“May our Lord, Jesus Christ,
Be before us to guide us,
Behind us to forgive us,
Beneath us to support us,
And above us to bless us, Now and Always,— Amen.”

ALLAN CAMERON CARPENTER

Loyalty ! Honor ! Scholarship !

"Before him lay the gray Azores; Behind, the gates of Hercules."

TODAY, we, like Columbus, face a new horizon. Behind us lie memories of hard work and good fun. Before us is the Great Unknown, the intriguing black shadow of the future. Pause with me a moment to review the past and plan for the future.

Not so long ago we crossed the threshold of this school into a different but still familiar world. Now that we again cross that threshold for the last time as students, we face a life for which most of us are eager but of which few of us are sure. Do you remember the day you entered this high school? Can you recall the motto of your Alma Mater as you first heard it? Loyalty, Honor, and Scholarship — three words that placed our feet firmly on the ladder of success. But all that is past now. Is there nothing to aid us in the future? Those same three words — Loyalty, Honor, and Scholarship — will help us climb the ladder of success.

Taking these three words in the order of their increasing importance, the first is Scholarship. In our twelve years of school work we have come to regard scholarship as the letters found on report cards. Keeping this in mind we tried to improve those marks and keep them as high as possible. Now we divide to go two separate ways. Some of us will continue our education in higher institutions; others, however, will go immediately to work. To the former, scholarship will have the same meaning, but to the latter it will become the standard of perfection for which to aim. Whichever way we choose, we must strive to do the best we can. Therefore, can we not call this tendency, scholarship?

Loyalty! The very sound of the word sends shivers down my spine. What does it call to mind? Perhaps the picture of a Christian martyr bravely facing hungry lions for the sake of a cause. Or the last words of Nathan Hale — "I regret that I have but one life to give for my country." Very few of us will have such an opportunity to display our loyalty. However, it is a necessary requisite for a successful career. Loyalty is the basis of lasting friendship; even the cliques formed here in school are based on this principle.

In the future our employers and teachers will base our value upon our loyalty to the work we have chosen. We shall be judged by our faithfulness in working towards our goal, and in this struggle no quarter will be given nor, as we might say, punches spared. This must, of necessity, take a great deal of perseverance, but few things worthwhile are gained with ease. Hence, ever will our loyalty be challenged.

The last but most important of these three precepts, as we shall call them, is Honor. Honor and pride have always been more or less linked together and have often been misinterpreted. By honor we do not mean the obeisance due to a conquering lord by an obsequious population. Rather let us refine it as the natural veneration given a fine character.

Can you think of some childhood hero? Do you remember the first person you placed on a pedestal apart from all others? Probably at that time this distinction was due to the fact that that person was outstanding in some sport or on the screen. Compare him to your present model. Is there a difference? Of course. As we grow and mature in mind and body, our opinions change. Today's favorite most likely has a pleasing personality and glowing character.

Nowadays we are apt to interpret the word "pride" as "haughtiness" or "disdain." But let us change this meaning to "self-confidence." In connection with honor we use it to express that feeling we all should have of keeping our minds on the highest possible level. Examples of this are common. Think of this lack in the slovenly tramp. Compare the picture to the one of the person on your pedestal. Do you see what I mean when I say that, if we are able with our pride to keep our standards high, we shall have honor, too?

Notice how these three principles will help us in the future. Scholarship will help us to aim for the brightest star. Loyalty will give us the endurance and faith to climb after that star, and honor will be the stimulus to keep us climbing.

WE in the United States are living in a country where democracy is put first, where we emphasize a high standard of living, and where we accentuate a government of the people, by the people, and for the people. Yet what do we do to stress our most important heritage, that for which our forefathers sacrificed their lives? What do we do to honor the citizenship of each American regardless of his race, color, or creed? This citizenship confers on one and all the responsibility and burden of making a democratic government for a democratic country. Yet do we recognize this responsibility by honoring our new citizens every year? No!

This is not a question which should be answered negatively, and out in Manitowoc County, Michigan, a college professor realized this fact. He knew the great importance of people becoming citizens, and he believed they should be made to understand the honor being conferred upon them. As a result of his efforts on their behalf, Manitowoc County had a Citizenship Recognition Day in May 1939. This was not just an ordinary holiday observed only by proclamation, but the people became filled with the spirit of the occasion. As a result, great crowds turned out for the parades and celebration. All this was done to honor and impress the young people who had just become citizens. They were impressed with their responsibility and thus were formally introduced to their country. The success of this celebration was so startling that other counties and other states staged similar holidays until Citizenship Recognition Day was recommended for national observance.

This holiday represents something new to the United States. We have always had holidays and have always celebrated them. But do they mean anything? Does the Fourth of July mean any more than noise, fireworks, and picnics? Does Washington's Birthday mean any more than one more day in our calendar of pleasure? I think not. These holidays mean little or nothing because they represent people and happenings that have lost their meanings to the people of the present generation. This is in contrast to Citizenship Recognition Day. The latter is a day that represents a living ideal, a day that will live and grow as people live and grow, because people will realize that it is important and so will celebrate the ideals it represents. There is a national need for such a day that will live in the hearts of all Americans and form a means of providing America with good citizens for the present and for the future. This ideal, represented by Citizenship Recognition Day, will grow, and our young people who are becoming citizens will realize the power and control that is being put into their hands. Then they will form a more reliable and responsible body to control the government of our country.

If we as a people are impressed with the responsibility we are being given when we are made citizens of the United States, we shall take more active interest in our government. We, the class of '41, are leaving school. We are to digress and cease to be a class. Some of us will go to college; some, to business school; some, to work, and some few to a life of doing nothing. Regardless of our personal desires, ambitions, successes, and failures, we are all in three or four years going to reach the age of twenty-one and become full-fledged citizens of these United States. If we are just allowed to take this step as a matter of course, something bound to happen anyway, then we shall continue life as though nothing unusual had happened. On the other hand, if we are welcomed to the part we are to play in the government of the United States, if we are made to take an interest in our country because our country has taken an interest in us, and if we give our fullest interest and support to that which is interested in and supporting us, then we shall become enthusiastic citizens ready to give our country all it can ask. This is the principle on which democracy has flourished, religion has spread, and now it is the principle which can make our American way of life expand and become fuller.

Thus I conclude that Citizenship Recognition Day can be a very important element developing responsible citizens who can make this a glorious democratic country. This can be a day that could live in the minds and hearts of the new citizens, for they would be impressed that citizenship in the United States is an honor and a responsibility.

JAMES ROY FOSTER

The Pursuit of Happiness

OUR Declaration of Independence proclaims that all men are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights; namely, life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness — the triple aim of man: life, which is activity; liberty, the freedom to think and act independently within the jurisdiction of democratic law; and the pursuit of happiness which is an attainment within itself. The goal intended in our national document was never the acquisition of this happiness but merely the right to seek the incomprehensible element which would make life more than just a “gleam between two eternities.”

What is your own conception of happiness? It is highly probable it will be quite different from that of your neighbor or anyone else for that matter. Happiness is personal and it represents something entirely different to each individual.

Francis Thompson, the English poet, defined happiness as the shadow of things passed, while Jean Jacques-Rousseau, the famous French philosopher, said it consisted chiefly of a good bank account, a good cook, and a good digestion.

There can be no definite explanation of happiness, but it is probably safe to assume that it can be divided into two classes. First is the happiness which grows with security. This is not a dream but a reality — an indispensable factor in sustaining the high standard of living which our civilization makes possible. It is the result of harmonious surroundings, congenial friends, and the satisfaction of physical essentials. It might be better called contentment.

The other happiness is elusive and unpredictable. It does not come from outstanding success or accomplishments but as the result of a chance word or an unexpected meeting. It has no motive, gives no explanation. Pursue it and it ever escapes, seize it or analyze it and it fades to insignificance in your grasp. It may come in moments of complete self-forgetfulness and last but a fleeting second. Transient, whimsical, capricious — it is more than contentment and less than ecstasy.

The pursuit of happiness is not a treasure hunt, but many people give the impression that they expect to find happiness wrapped in a brown-paper parcel clearly labeled for their convenience. They plan their lives carefully to insure gratification. Take the dictator, for example, whose one ambition is to dictate. He may hide his real thought with patriotic phrases but it is still the underlying motive. If it means the destruction of a people, the ruination of a country or the loss of an entire civilization, well, that is too bad. At least he has satisfied his desire.

But when we let one motive destroy our reason and obscure all other considerations, we often blunder foolishly. Even a dictator can make mistakes and it is the little defects, the inconsequential errors that build up a final defeat.

There has never yet been any cause, whether just or unjust, that endured, for even a short time, without a strong carefully-built foundation and the one and only positive foundation for the happiness of an individual or a nation is a sound, definite purpose. If a man was devoid of all ambition, all desire, and all curiosity, it is quite probable he would never know unhappiness, for unhappiness must have a reason. There can be no defeat without a cause any more than there can be any success without an aim.

To seek lasting happiness individually is wasted time for there can be no permanent happiness for any person while all about him there is discontent and a general state of oppression.

The purpose of a nation must be the purpose of its people. The United States has such a purpose; that of the ideal democracy in which man is free to pursue not only happiness but fullness of life. It is the goal of our Declaration of Independence — life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. With this as our aim individually and collectively, how can we possibly fail?

RACHEL ALTHEA STEINER

Vocational Training for Citizenship

AN appeal is being made all over the world for woman to accept her responsibilities as a citizen. This does not mean merely that she should go to the polls and cast her vote for the candidate whom her husband prefers. Woman has a special mission. With her, there is strong feeling for people rather than things. Her interests settle in the problems of the home, the housing conditions, the child labor laws, the pure food laws.

The good housekeeper has executive ability and so insists that the environment of the city be healthful, and beautiful. Therefore her influence is felt in beautiful parks, playgrounds, and streets, as well as homes. No good citizen can live in a little world centered on her own limited interests. She must act for the public good.

Since the most important thing in democracy is an intelligent citizen, the development of good citizenship must be the aim of education. The home should produce such citizens. The home and the school combined can train both leaders and followers to play their parts well.

How does vocational training of students offer opportunity for development of good citizenship? First, in making the student capable of earning an honest living, the school has gone a long way toward this goal. Household Arts training for girls results in employment in profitable positions in homes, in stores, tea-rooms and as nurses. They are also trained for the future for care of their own homes. They learn how to run the home in an economical way, and at the same time to have it an attractive one.

A third function of good citizenship is the cultivation of the best personal interests and traits, and this is accomplished in the courses in arts, handicraft, and personality training.

Today, in the universal problem of a nation's defense, Household Arts training is functioning as never before. Capable persons trained in this field are in the service of this country in many departments of the National Defense Commission.

Committees of experts are meeting in Washington to work out the problem of nutrition as it is concerned with the defense program. Examination of draftees has proved the need for better nutrition. Industry is calling for more men, and their training demands good health as well as skill. Studies are being made on ways to increase the intake of vitamins and minerals. Attention is being given to the nation's resources of protective food. It is important for students to learn of these resources and of what can be done to conserve and distribute them to the most people.

So we find the Household Arts training plays its important part in times of peace and of national emergency, and so does its work in reaching that most important goal, — good citizenship.

EVELYN FRANCES BABINEAU

Vocational Training as an Aid to Defense

MANY people say that money is man's best asset. Others say good health and ambition, but today one must have in addition to these, the security of a good trade that is an important cog in defense program wheels.

Our national security lies heavily on the men behind the lines, mechanics in many fields, and men who can handle tools with speed and precision. A cry for such skilled mechanics has gone up throughout the land. Huge war orders brought to light the fact that we are short of skilled workmen.

Our nation is just perceiving that we must get in shape, not for battle, but to defend our peace. Among the first to get into high gear were the vocational educational systems to supply the call for workers which came from industry.

The Greenfield Vocational School has four divisions: the Unit Trade Machine Shop, the Print Shop, the Cabinet or Wood Shop, and the General Metal and Auto Repair Shop. These school courses are so outlined as to give a pupil a general idea of the industry he is entering and still properly prepare him for the particular branch desired. "How," you may ask, "does each shop contribute to the National Defense Program?"

The machine shop seems most important to us because local plants are largely machine industries. The first group to complete the course last year were all placed before they graduated and all have made good. This year, likewise, the seniors have been placed and many left school to go to those jobs.

Work done in this shop is largely practical. The boys have built motorizing units on several of their own machines and have made many of their own tools such as hand and machine reamers. They are also making many of the tools to be used in the new addition to their shop. In the print shop they placed a guard over moving belts.

Because it keeps the public up to date through newspapers, teaches with books, and makes records and notes permanent, the printing industry is vital to national defense. This year our printing department production rose above last year's 450 definite jobs. Modern printing is made up of a large number of different trades, so that the old saying that a man is a printer no longer defines his work. Our equipment permits the best training in hand composition and job presswork and also allows for some practical experience in cylinder presswork.

The Cabinet or Wood Shop is concerned with defense projects because wherever there are soldiers there must be barracks and utility and recreational buildings. Besides in camp construction woodworkers will be and are needed in the building of plant expansions and also in industry itself where small-scale models are built for various purposes. Factory production methods in the Cabinet Shop have given boys valuable experience. Blueprint reading also broadens knowledge nearer to defense study.

Experience with acetylene and electric welders and an up-to-date lubricating outfit makes boys in the General Metal and Auto Repair Shop valuable in many mechanical fields. The modern motorized army needs another small army of expert mechanics to keep it rolling. In aviation production welding and sheet metal work play a very important part.

As a reward for good citizenship, cooperation, and perfect attendance students are given bonus time. This is added to their total time and may be taken off for sickness or for some other worthy excuse. This promotes punctuality and good citizenship which are fully as valuable to national security as arms and ammunition.

Last year a Vocational Guidance Council was started which gave pupils more voice in the affairs of the school.

A placement bureau in the Vocational School office brings the employers nearer to the school through constant contact and also gives the student initiative for better grades. This cooperation between school and industry is of no small significance.

The defense program should be the concern of every American. Physical and moral preparedness is only one part of the picture. We need backbone instead of wishbone.

DOUGLAS STANLEY TUTTLE

Why I Am Glad I Live in a Democracy

"KNOCK and it shall be opened unto you; ask, and ye shall receive." Surrounded by the almost limitless opportunities offered by a democracy, it is impossible for me to be anything but glad that I live in that type of nation.

To begin with, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, and the right to petition, offered by the democracy, give me, the citizen, a first-hand opportunity to express my opinion. Also, these rights stimulate my individuality which the dictator must destroy if he is to win. Furthermore, democracy offers to me religious toleration which some dictatorial rulers have dared refuse to their people. There is no cynical dictator in a democracy to refuse these advantages which make me, the individual, the important element of the government.

Further, in a democracy public opinion creates law, while in a dictatorship the law forbids public opinion. Most naturally I am glad the former exists here, subject, however, to one condition: namely, culture. A public which is uneducated is a serious handicap, as it is influenced easily by false promises. However, this would-be setback is overcome in my democracy by its free educational system. This opportunity offered me is one of the most important reasons why I am glad I live in a democracy.

Moreover, a democracy offers continual advancement for the well-educated person. On the other hand, in a dictatorship many brilliant men lose their lives or become permanent prisoners because their knowledge is dangerous to dictatorial principles. Besides, I am glad that my democracy is able to settle its problems at the polls rather than in armed conflict. However, this wise rule by the public majority is directly responsible to the previously mentioned system of education.

No matter how highly educated the voters are, they cannot rule a democracy without a capable leader. These men are not all born leaders. They rise from the midst of the common men. Therefore, in my opinion, the greatest asset of a citizen in a democracy is his opportunity to rise above his environment. Abraham Lincoln is an outstanding example of one who rose above his surroundings of poverty, ignorance, and vice to insure our democratic unity. An associate once said of Lincoln, "We followed his lead, but he followed nobody." Lincoln's unselfishness and broad-mindedness as a leader is shown in his own words: "I am nothing; the Union and Constitution, everything." Lincoln had only a small fraction of our favorable circumstances, but he certainly knew how to make the most of them. Thus he set an example for us to prize the opportunities available in a government of social equality.

Consequently, in a democracy there is no unimportant person — all men are created equal. True, the populace is widely separated as to occupation and leisure-time enjoyment, but all share alike the personal opportunities offered only by a democracy.

WALTER AUSTIN GAINES

Patriotism

*"Breathes there the man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said:
This is my own, my native land?"*

— Sir Walter Scott

JUST what is this thing called patriotism? Webster defines it as being "love of one's country." Yes, that is true — as far as it goes. However, there is something more. Patriotism is a state of emotion — the reaction to some sort of stimulus. There are two sides to it — the patriotism of peace and the heroism of war.

On the pages of Ancient History we read of men whose very lives were acts of patriotism. Among the early Greeks and Romans, men were trained to be fearless warriors, and in ancient Sparta even women were taught that the only thing of importance was the state. Life was difficult in those days, and nothing was gained for one's country without a struggle.

When new lands were settled and new civilizations were started, there were more people. Each group, besides having its own ideas of right and wrong, was loyal to its own country. In time of peace people worked for the prosperity of their nation. They farmed the land, settled together in increasingly larger communities, started trade and industry, and set up forms of government. All of these were for the betterment of their respective countries.

By way of illustration, England was one of the first to realize that patriotism of peace means certain basic rights for men as individuals. For some time the English people had suffered under the cruel tyranny of King John. Finally a group of patriotic barons organized against him. In the year 1215, in the famous meadow of Runnymede they forced him to sign the first great charter of liberties known as the Magna Charta. Thus was born the idea that patriotism may mean the determined struggle against the wrongs of mankind. Therefore, it is not an emotion brought about by war alone.

On the other hand, the best example of the patriotism displayed in time of war is the splendid fight of our forefathers in conquering the wilderness of North America and making the strong, proud nation that we know today. The first settlers had to struggle continually against the Indians, the dense forests, the cruel cold of winter, and against starvation. Time and again they were driven back, but each time they tried anew. Why? Because they had faith in America.

Then came our war for independence. This story takes us to such familiar places as Bunker Hill, Valley Forge, and Yorktown. It was at Bunker Hill that the hastily-gathered Minutemen showed their fierce determination. Twice they relentlessly drove back the British, but the third time, having exhausted the store of ammunition, they lost their stand. It was such men as Paul Revere, George Washington, Nathanael Greene, and John Paul Jones who helped to fight for and win the independence of this country. They were the beginners. With their guidance and care, their toil and struggles, our country grew. They made America a land of which to be proud.

When the same sort of patriotism is expected today, youth, in reply to the demands of age, might rise up in rebellion. Born in the shadow of one war, reared in the darkness of depression, their hopes of future happiness blighted by conscription, and the whole nation tottering on the brink of another war, they might say, "It's all very well for you to talk. You're the generation of yesterday. But what about us? We're the generation that's taking it on the chin. Everything we've ever known — our whole way of life — is falling to pieces around us. Is all this the wonderful heritage you're handing to us?"

Yes, that's what they could say. But they're not! And what is the reason? Could it be that the inner spark of patriotism still burns within them? Perhaps it's a trace of the old fighting spirit of their ancestors that makes them willing to give up life as they've known it and go forward to preserve the freedom of their country. Perhaps it's because they realize that they wouldn't really be happy if their heritage of this beautiful land — safe and free forever — were merely handed to them. They must fight for the country in which they have faith.

As all individuals are growing up to take their rightful place in this mighty drama of life, the youth of today should realize this great responsibility. They are to be the rulers of tomorrow, and it is their job to keep the name of America untarnished. They speak a language which is covering all the earth, and they will grow to know how rich is the opportunity and how great is the glory of being born in a free, beautiful land.

The promise of what man will do has been given in what man has done in the past — namely, his peace-time and war-time patriotism. We who are living today know that there is here a world which our ancestors never dreamed could exist.

Look hopefully, then, to your country. Rest assured in the thought that its people — that race of proud, determined Americans — still have that devout love of country by which they will make secure the welfare of these United States.

Class History

THE DIARY OF PRIVATES IKE AND MIKE IN THE 41ST REGIMENT FIRST YEAR

IN the fall of 1938, in September to be exact, a group of rookies entered the barracks at G. H. S. for three years of intensive training. We were to be trained under the able leadership of General E. B. Smith, who had held the fort for many years.

We were not organized until we elected "Buttons" Raymond, Colonel; Ethel Smith and "Shorty" Carpenter, Lieutenant Colonels. The Adjutant was "Jackie" Scott, and Lois Stowe, one who has left us now, was Sergeant.

With the help of our troop, the home company won the award for the most noise at the encounter of the speed units at the Fair Grounds. Now with high spirits and a strong feeling that we were helping to strengthen the base of our fort, we settled down to learn as much or as little as we could during our training in the home camp.

After much hard work we were overjoyed to hear that the 40th Regiment was going to entertain for one night. We enjoyed our night's leave immensely, and to General Smith's dislike many privates were A. W. O. L. when the bugle blew the next morning. That was our first real chance to appear in full uniform, and two of the 40th Regiment designed to be our hostesses decided to help us all the way. They were our ski-jumping friends, "Dot" Graves and "Ace" O'Hara. With all this being done for us, we, the 41st Regiment, started a Dramatic Corps headed by Private Rose Grant. This was to pay back the 40th Regiment with some entertainment of our own.

The thunder of battle could then be heard echoing from Beacon Field as our gallant warriors fought through a very successful season. Some of the fellows from the 41st Regiment who helped to attain this goal were "Jim" Maloney, "Joe" Ciolek, Frank Guglielmo, "Les" Call, "Bob" Peno, and "Tom" Griswold.

The mid-"knock-outs" were now coming nearer, and the midnight oil was being burnt more freely in an attempt to stay with the regiment as it progressed to the highest rank a soldier can reach, a Senior Private.

The time, when all young people even those in our army lose their hearts, Valentine's Day, was rapidly approaching, and the hard-working men of the 41st Regiment's Guidance Council were elected to plan this evening's furlough in real G. H. S. style. Those in whom the responsibility was placed were Marguerite Raymond, Arlene Reece, Allan Carpenter, Anne Britton, Eleanor Mulvaney, Jeannette Lapointe, "Al" Spungin, "Ray" Moore, and I, myself. The flag was immediately taken over by the talented musicians who presented in excellent fashion "Hearts of the Campus" which sent every one's hearts jumping.

After a successful season on the diamond, we found "Rich" Kells and "Nick" Shibilo carrying the banner for our regiment.

Then, as spring rapidly progressed, we had to take a back seat to the First-Class Privates, who were leaving our halls forever.

SECOND YEAR

In the second year at the barracks we chose Allan Carpenter as Colonel, Ethel Smith and David Kelleher as Lieutenant Colonels, Arlene Reece as Adjutant, and Jacqueline Scott as Treasurer. They, except for Carpenter who had been elected Lieutenant Colonel in his first year, had all been privates the former year along with the rest of us.

We tried very hard to fall back into the routine army life, but the long summer furlough had not vacated our minds as yet. Subsequently, most of the privates resorted to some diversions in the barracks apart from the tiresome drilling.

Not long after we were back, General Smith sent out to each camp a mandamus that the attendance of every single private was requested at the following morning's bugle call and prayer meeting. It was a fine day, and we looked inquisitively at the paper General Smith held in his hand. After the little ceremony, he announced that an insurance was available for all of the privates participating in recreational maneuvers. This meant just paying a little extra besides the regular Save a Soldier (S. A. S.) dues. Of course we were behind the other barracks in acting upon this, because Governor Saltonstall was late in signing the bill which permitted it. The greatest amount paid by this insurance was $200 for the loss of an eye. Chipped teeth, cut lips, and broken bones ran lower than that amount.

Many of the ingenious and consistent privates managed to become members of the Pro-Machiavelian Society in their second year of training. They were Privates Howard Bigelow, Angelo Bruno, Mildred Burkill, Helen Douglas, Rose Grant, Elinor Herr, Jane Holmes, Gwladys Howes, Emily Lahoski, Dorothy Lee, Helen Leskiewicz, Flavin Maher, Eileen McLaud, Catherine Morris, Marguerite Raymond, Arlene Reece, Sophie Salisiewski, Alfred Spungin, Geraldine Stanton, Doris Wheeler, and Anne Wisnewski. Twenty-two in all, but gunpowder! The girls outnumbered the boys, but that's not speaking too well for the girls because they were not represented on the barrack's great football team.

It certainly was a team! A great team! They even won the Valley League Championship when they crashed to pieces the Turners' garrison and its outposts. Our troops were represented by some Super-Man privates. They were "Bob" Peno, "Art" Flynn, "Jimmy" Maloney, Kendall Knapp, "Joe" Ciolek, Leslie Call, Frank Guglielmo, and Angelo Bruno. They did shine, not only on the field, but on the fourth page of the "Camponent."

Speaking of the army paper, I remember the privates reading it backward — just like in China. They started on the fourth page and read the front one if there was time. David Kelleher was then the Associate-Editor. Oh! I remember some good fourth-page news. Private "Cappie" Fuchs wouldn't say whether or not he liked girls' knee socks. Private "Rabbit" Spungin wrote in one of his meditations, "Oh, yes — one last word of warning. When you retire, don't pull the blankets up too high or your fiddlestick out at the bottom." I had to try it before I caught on.

Then came the "Confucius says." Oh! — he was detested more at the barracks in a few months than he has been loved when first introduced. This being leap year, the privates rather enjoyed one of his sayings: "Just because man say he will call on telephone is no sign he will give you ring."

Many of the privates violated rules while they were driving through traffic and otherwise. So rules were made and were to be enforced. Among them were: — lights on, horn working, brakes on. Some didn't see how progress could be made.

Not very long after the Mid-"Knock-Outs" Private Walter Gaines was awarded a medal by the State Department of Agriculture for the best judging of some breeding, speckled Sussex birds or something. Anyway he deserved it, for a baked chicken is the only kind most of us recognized.

Along with our spring fever, which incidentally got a very early start by the results of the Mid-"Knock-Outs," came our annual musical show, "Nautical Marietta." We were just being polite to the marines; otherwise it would have been "Swanky Soldiers." Privates Jane Holmes, "Binky" McGreevy, and Paul Spencer sang solos.

"Jimmy" Foster and Allan Carpenter were elected as representatives of our Hi-Y to the Third National Hi-Y Congress at Oberlin College in Ohio.

Different troops certainly were busy choosing their officers. Delta Sigma Rho elected Arlene Reece as President, Ethel Smith and Mary Sears as Vice-Presidents, Dorothy Lee as Secretary, Rachel Lyman and "Peg" Gustavson as co-chairmen of the program committee.

The Hi-Y elected Private Allan Carpenter as President, Richard Pedigree as Vice-President, Norman Nau as Secretary, and Kendall Knapp as Librarian.

The blue print department, better known as the Art Club, chose Private Barbara Graves as President.

Then came "June Mad," that romantic comedy. Private Rose Grant played the part of the adventuress. Arlene Reece and Shirley Joslyn had leading parts.

Alas! The Final "Knock-Outs" came too soon. Verne, the magician, should have visited us then and told us about how to win marks without influencing people and without studying for examinations. We all would have succeeded. Nevertheless most of the privates were victorious, and even the ones that had received oodles of "pink" papers for A. W. O. L. were rewarded with another long summer furlough.

Private "Ike"

THIRD YEAR

After our two months' leave of absence, we swung back into decisive action, as this was the last year of our training. For the second time in our lives at the barracks, we chose the popular Mr. Carpenter as the head of the regiment. Marguerite Raymond and "Dick" Pedigree acted as his Lieutenant Colonels, Leslie Call as Adjutant, and "Sailor" King as Sergeant. Shortly after, the different companies got together and chose an advisory board made up of the following First-Class Privates: Elaine Annis, Phyllis Duffney, Mary Duffy, Genevieve Farr, "Art" Flynn, Vera Jackman, Lucille Kelley, Jeannette Lapointe, Raymond Perry, Arlene Reece, "Jackie" Scott, Ethel Smith, and Doris Wheeler.

With the preliminaries over, we swung into the wars on the gridiron and waged a more than successful campaign. Some of the men who were decorated for their bravery were: "Joe" Ciolek, Angelo Bruno, "Rich" Tetreault, Frank Guglielmo, "Bob" Peno, "Tommy" Griswold, "Art" Flynn, and "Jimmy" Maloney.

The dramatic talent of the 41st Regiment was shown in the annual barracks entertainment which was "Young April." Almost every one was given permission to attend except a few who had violated too many A. W. O. L.'s. The privates who showed their ability in this show were: Catherine Morris, Raymond Moore, Alfred Spungin, Rose Grant, Howard Bigelow, Elinor Herr, Ethel Smith, Lawrence Babits, George Maniatty, Nancy Hollister, Marguerite Raymond, Vivian Williams, Jean O'Brien, Mary Duffy, Frank Kamienski, and Norman Nau.

Then the regiments got together financially and presented Mr. Smith with an easy chair and a lamp as a token of great thanks and loyalty to a great and honorable leader, who retires this June.

The knights of the polished court — "Bob" Peno, Lawrence Babits, "Pete" Muschovic, and "Ollie" Marion moved through their blitzkriegs during the winter months and had a favorable campaign winning a large majority of their encounters.

As the cold weather progressed, the loyal soldiers of Regiment 41 dug in to stave off an attack by the Mid-"Knock-Outs." It was on the whole a successful encounter, and no one was left dead.

After the "Knock-Outs" we all turned our attention to the fallen-below-the-level funds of the

S. A. S. (Save a Soldier). The faculty came to our rescue. At first they gave the play, "The Bat," including an all-star cast, which was certainly a smashing success. All of us privates enjoyed seeing our majors in a different element than in the class room.

Then the great football banquet came along. Each football letter man was presented, after the feast, with a gold football. The lucky ones were: Angelo Bruno, Leslie Call, Joseph Ciolek, Arthur Flynn, Thomas Griswold, Frank Guglielmo, Frank Holub, Donald Lyman, James Maloney, Robert Peno, Richard Tetreault, and Douglas Tuttle.

The girls were outstanding in their polished floor skirmishes and deserve attention. They were Marguerite Raymond, Geraldine Stanton, Helen Muschovic, Ellen Duffy, Elaine Sexton, "Jackie" Harper, Bertha Merz, "Jacky" Scott, Lucille Kelley.

Meanwhile the A. W. O. L.'s had been piling up, for, even with all of the duties unfinished, the privates were going hunting and fishing. Subsequently, the council granted concessions on absence for hunting and fishing. The petition was drawn up and signed by fifty orderly privates. Of course there were stipulations — such as having an A or B average in the subject, etc., but practically all who wanted to go fishing or hunting went. Catherine Morris bought her fishing license with the money she won in the Legion Oratorical Contest.

Then came "Barnum Was Right" — that great musical success. Privates Shirley Joslyn, Mary Wood, Helen St. Denis, Paul Spencer, Jane Holmes, "Betty" Deland, "Binky" McGreevy, and Howard Bigelow certainly had active parts.

Speaking of musical events reminds me of "Jimmy" Young, our great trumpeter who left the barracks to enlist as a student for a six-year term in the Navy School of Music. He had played in the band for two years, and his trumpet was always missed at the musicals.

Oh! I forgot "The Sultans of Swing" directed by Major Erickson. They put on a successful show to help the S. A. S. In the group were Paul Spencer, James Dinsmore, and Howard Bigelow.

Once more the faculty stepped in to help. This time they played basketball and almost, but not quite, won the game.

Later on, towards spring, money prizes were offered for essays. Several took advantage, and Walter Gaines and Helen Douglas emerged successful. Before we knew it, all pictures had been taken, caps and gowns measured, for spring fever had set in, and the faculty chose seven class-day speakers. They were "Jimmy" Foster, Walter Gaines, Dorothy Lee, Arlene Reece, Rachel Steiner, Evelyn Babineau, and Douglas Tuttle.

Without warning, the final "Knock-Outs" arrived, and we waged a fierce battle. The garrison was left somewhat battered but revived with the prospect of a happy graduation ahead. Then came the banquet and the graduation exercises — the diplomas — and our selective service was finished.

We all left the garrison with firm determination in our minds to achieve our individual fame, however small, and thus make General Smith proud of his 41st Regiment.

ARTHUR CHARLES FLYNN

Class Prophecy

TIME: In the future.
PLACE: Greenfield Railroad Station.
CHARACTERS: Joe Alumnus, Josephine Alumna.

Jos. A.: So, when Conductor Griswold called, "All out for Greenfield," I got off the train and to my surprise was met by the beaming face of Porter "Cappy" Fuchs, who, because of his large bay window, had difficulty handling my bags. He gave them to taxi driver Sleepy "Larry" Babits, while I came into the restaurant here to meet you.

Joe. A.: Did you notice who the waitress was?

Jos. A.: Yes, I saw Shirley Joslyn trip over a bucket of water as she came in from the kitchen. The owners, Perry and Perry, must be pretty lenient.

Joe. A.: The people get stuck here anyway with this terrible food. Of course the cooks may get better. Chef "Nick" Shibilo and his helpers, Virginia Wing, Sophie Salisiewski, Anne Malloy, Eileen McLaud, and Genevieve Farr have only had twenty years' experience.

Jos. A.: Well, let's leave, I can't eat this. Besides "Bob" Peno had just fixed the nickelodeon, and you can't hear a thing.

Joe. A.: I bet Miles Street has changed since you last saw it.

Jos. A.: Not so much. I see that Maloney's Pool Room business is still flourishing. Isn't that Walter Gaines, "Jimmy" Herrick, Ralph Rogers, "Charlie" Johnson, and "Tony" Guerino swaggering in? And what a gang coming out!

Joe. A.: Yeah, that's Balfour Hunt. By the way, remind me to get my hair cut here tomorrow at "Benny" Buonaiuto's Barber Shop. Benny's got some nifty manicurists: Phyllis Duffney, Ann Britton, "Peg" Antone, and Madeline Clifford. If you don't want a manicure, they just hold your hand. Ah, bliss! The barbers, Ephraim Metelica, "Jimmy" Brown, "Jimmy" Rucci, and "Phil" Martin are good, too.

Jos. A.: What's that snazzy hot-spot next to the Stanton-Steiner Stadium?

Joe. A.: That's the Cotton Club, Jr. Betty Deland is their songstress. Those girls going into it now are the hostesses: "Duddy" Duncan, "Jackie" Harper, Helen Douglas, Verne Spencer, and "Bev" Sedgwick. That famous singer and dancer, "Charlie" Scott, is there this week.

Jos. A.: Say, I can remember the Colucci Dress Salon across the street. Do they still have the same pretty models for the fashion shows as they had before? There were Katherine Barber, Mary Herrick, Eleanor Pregony, Viola Ginuisz, and Marian Hertsch.

Joe. A.: Yes, they do, but they still don't serve refreshments with their shows.

Jos. A.: Boy! That's a big enough billboard Henry Wisnewski and "Ken" McGrath are putting up. What is "Bailey Was Wrong" anyway?

Joe. A.: Haven't you ever heard of Big-Shot Briggs' Circus with its glamor "gal" troop consisting of: Eleanor Weiss, lion tamer; "Gerry" Sullivan, tight-rope walker; Phyllis Turner, jitter-bug dancer on horseback; Helen Muslovic, human cannon ball; Wee Lucille Kelley, a strong lady who is able to lift both Esther and Flavia Maher at the same time; "Lizzy" Greene and Margaret Coughlin, trapeze artists; Lucille Lovett, peanut vender; Rhona Burleigh and Sophie Olszewski, clowns?

Jos. A.: Hey, watch out! Wow! who's in that bus that almost hit you?

Joe. A.: That's Alpha Beta Pi Alumnae. Look at the sign, "New York or Bust." Ha, ha. Well, they finally got started. They're sure to get there with "Danny Demon" Duffy at the wheel and sister Ellen at the brake. Gee, don't Jeannette LaPointe, Jean O'Brien, and "Edie" Cummings look scared? You wouldn't think that at their age Shirley Renfrew, Elaine Sexton, Jane McIntosh, and Camille Streeter would be leaning out of the windows whistling at those handsome Camp Devens boys: Edward Stetson, John Poirier, Henry Dion, Frank Musiak, and "Stan" LaCount.

Jos. A.: There's a big parade on Main Street. I wonder what's going on. Say, that's Mary Lou Wood, drum-major. Don't those middle-aged band players look funny squeezed into their old green and white uniforms, especially "Bob" Ament, "Jimmy" Dinsmore, Paul Spencer, "Norm" Nau, "Cliff" Bernard, and Lyman Dunnell? Hey, Pedigree's carrying a sign, "Re-elect Carpenter Mayor." And there's "Al" himself in the black limousine, sitting complacently beside his glamorous secretary, that red-headed Vivian Smith. "Al's" publicity manager, "Binky" McGreevy, is giving out handfuls of cigars to the men and gobs of personality to the women. Guess Mary Sears never forgot the vigorous campaign of '40. At two minute intervals she yells "rah for Wilkie." Let's go over to see what "Al's" opponent, Bigelow, is raving about on the soap box in front of the Elizabeth Martha Touher Goodie Shoppe. Bigelow's henchman, "Vic" Crossman, "Billy" Farrell, John Herdiech and John Zon, with detective books under their arms, are watching his every move.

Joe. A.: Even Serg. "Art" Yobst, in spite of his flat feet, is out trying to control the mob. In fact all the red noses and blue uniforms are out: Eugene Tuvek, John Metelica, Roy Welcome, and "Bob" Remillard. There's jovial Reporter "Jimmy" Foster writing fast and furiously for "Recorder's" editor-in-chief, "Dave" Kelleher. Say, what's the commotion across the street?

Jos. A.: It's a uniform; it's "Charlie" King. Brass buttons certainly attract the women. "Betty" Whitney, Ruth Phelps, Jean Jarry, Norma Whalen, and Lois Winder are all in his wake. Let's get out of this crowd, anyway.

Joe. A.: Yeah, let's go before "Windy" Clark starts his campaign speech. We could sneak in at this vaudeville show. The sign is "The World Metropolis" under the management of "Billy" Rose" Tuttle. The chorus includes Gwladys Howes, "Dot" Lee, "Dee-Dee" Morrissey, Jessie Zachlowski, Loretta Volpi, and Helen Markham. There is a specialty number by Ann Trautwein.

Jos. A.: We'll get a paper at this news stand first and see what's playing at the Murley-Merz Theatre; it's cheaper there. Great scott, "Jimmy" Young's picture is on the front page. "Famous Trumpeter Returns From Grand Tour of Europe." He was received upon his return at the home of the great opera star, Jane Holmes. For entertainment they had that comedian team of radio fame, "Johnny" Moylan and "Ollie" Marion. Those present were: A. P. Spungin, Chicago politician; Elinor Susanne Herr, novelist; Dorothy Graves, international ski champion; Peter Mushovic, the noted mad scientist; Frank Guglielmo, architect of those new style dog houses with zipper doors; Nancy Hollister DuPont, society leader and fashion editor of the "Jac Scott Styles" magazine.

Jos. A.: No, that's an "ad" drawn by Barbara Graves and written by Vera Jackman. It says, "Buy Bette Petti Pinking Shears. They cut your sewing in half." My! My! Here's the theatre section. "Goon With the Wind," starring "Ruse" Grant as Starlett O'Hara and "Don Juan" Lyman as Bet Butler with an all-star cast including Evelyn John, Joyce Cook, and Virginia Wing.

Joe. A.: That sounds all right, but it's too nice a day to go to the movies. Look for the sports page and see what teams are playing at Kamienski Park.

Jos. A.: Wait a minute; I want to see what Helen Rogers says in her "Advice to the Lovelorn" column. Hmm! it's not here. Betty Harrington's "How to Get Your Man" is here instead. Here's the sport section. John Radavich has an article on "How to Play Golf." He uses "Fighting" Raymond as an example of the way good golf should be played. Her team — Lucille Darling, Claire Englehardt, and "Rosey" Fontaine — played John's team — "Charlie" Sokolosky, Norman Carme, "Al" Pulaski, and George Maniatty.

Joe. A.: Never mind the sports section anyway. Everyone listens to the Big League games in front of Franklin's Drug Store. The listeners look pretty excited!

Jos. A.: No wonder, the bases are loaded. Two outs, and "Slugger" Flynn is up for the Red Sox. Timely "Tommy" O'Hara has just relieved "Wild Walt" Pulaski on the mound for the Yanks. Umpire Carrier is calling "STRIKE ONE — STRIKE TWO — STRI - - - no, it's a long, long fly to third-baseman Kells. The Yanks chalk up another victory. "Sluggers" public is disgusted and it is reported that his girl, "Peg" Gustavson just breezed out of the park.

Joe. A.: Chee, there's a fire across the street at the Zera-Young Hotel! That's Steward Woodrow McCain tripping out of the front door. He's trying in vain to break the safety glass on the Interlande Fool-Proof Fire Alarm. Fire Chief Tetreault has already been notified anyway by Hasty Helen Henrietta Leskiewicz.

Joe. A.: There's the new fire truck now screeching around the corner of Main and Jubb Street. "Stogie Billy" Belton is back seat driver, while "Joe" Niedbala is the proud "Mugwump" up front. Former trapeze artist, "Howie" Keegan, is trying out the new extension ladder to save that maiden in distress, Stella Korzon, while the other girls who aren't blondes — Helen St. Denis, Helen Radle, Mary Organ, and Marcia Hosford — are jumping into the big nets held by five stalwarts — Angelo Bruno, Henry Bednarski, "Joe" Baker, "Les" Call, and "Joe" Ciolek. Daring Allen Dimond is gallantly attempting the rescue of red-headed Hope Peffer, who is frantically waving her arms about her calling for help. Ethel Haskins, Rachel Lyman, Theresa Carter, and Gloria Mathey are standing by and sighing, wishing that they could be rescued under such exciting circumstances by such handsome men.

Joe. A.: How did the fire start anyway?

Joe. A.: "Muggles" Kreutzer just said that it started in the Glazeski Sisters' Laundry where Julia Greene left the iron on "Tommy" Luipolds' red silk pajamas when she went next door to talk to Everett Purrington who works in the Tilton-Wheeler Pawn Shop, where the Hodas Insurance Company recently pawned their policies to avert bankruptcy.

Joe. A.: Where are the firemen going?

Joe. A.: They just got a message from "Ed" Karas, Keeper of the Checkers, that the fire station was burning.

Joe. A.: Look at the gang coming down the street. Gosh! they're all women. The banner carried by Eleanor Mulvaney says: "Women of America! The time has come to rise and let your husbands know who wears the pants of the family."

Jos. A.: The one carried by Agnes Murdock and Norma Green says: "Why be a Back-Seat Driver any longer? You take the Wheel!" Marion Vlach, Phyllis Fall, Juliette Chevalier, and Helen McGrath all have that same determined look of reformers.

Joe. A.: All but Helen Graves Flavin. She's looking around uneasily, probably fearful that husband John is somewhere around. Wanda Pupek is leading the group and right behind her Seinita Boynton and Irene Yourga are carrying the biggest sign of all: "Down with giving in; up with giving out." Say, that reminds me, Raymond Moore's case is being tried this afternoon. "Ray" is being accused by Catherine Morris of breach of promise way back in 1941. Let's follow "Betty" Bickford to the courtroom. She's one of the witnesses.

Jos. A.: Let's take the seats behind the jury; we can hear better. For heaven's sake! Did you ever think that Edna Gadomski, Evelyn Babinneau, Vivian Williams, Audrey Vanasse, Ann Wisnewski, and Mary Grader would be on the jury?

Joe. A.: I think Catherine's defending herself, but poor "Ray" has two lawyers: Leslie Williams and Robert Cade.

Jos. A.: Judge Rohde looks pretty haggard. The case must have been going on for a long time.

Joe. A.: I guess so. Grace Maleno, the other woman, looks pretty tense, and Clerk Robert Purrington looks as if he's written a lot. Catherine's witnesses — Mildred Burkill, teacher; Ethel Andres, librarian; and Elizabeth Gadomski, President of the Busy Bee Sewing Circle, — have just finished their testimonies. It certainly looks bad for Raymond because his witnesses — Emily Lahoski, night club hostess; and "Jimmy" Collins — didn't give good alibis.

Jos. A.: There couldn't have been much doubt in the minds of the jury. They're already back. Mary Bresciano, Gloria Davey, Esther Tuttle, Marianne Jacobs, and Phyllis Machowski look pretty determined and very indignant. What did their speaker, "Marge" Bassett, say?

Joe. A.: She gave the verdict as guilty. Poor "Ray," it's a good thing his job at Rockwood Gravel and Lumber Company pays well. Let's leave before the next trial. Leon Ball is suing Owen Drumgool for not returning his little blue date book that he loaned him two months ago.

Ball has had the book ever since 1941, and it's still as good as ever. I've heard that it contains the names and telephone numbers of every blonde in Greenfield and also those of Ruth Keyes, Hazel Luce, Elaine Annis, Ethel Smith, Phyllis Richason, and Arlene Reece.

Jos. A.: Good golly, I almost forgot I was just killing time until the Kilbourne Limited came. I've had such a good time I forgot all about Closson Corners. Now I've only two minutes to get the train.

Joe. A.: Wow, well let's go. Babits is waiting outside, and he's sure to get us there on time or else. —

Ivy Ode

Tune: Auld Lang Syne

We plant this ivy here today
Long may it live and grow,
Long may it climb and stretch its limbs
This plant that we do sow.
That it may bring the memories back
The memories that so dear,
Will linger with us into life
And always bring us cheer.

We plant this ivy here today
And hope that it will be,
A symbol of our deeds in school
And of hope and charity.
Long may these deeds survive the plant
To guide those in our steps,
And hope that they will see the way
In our dear old G. H. S.

RAYMOND GEORGE MOORE

Class Song

Chorus of tune: Till We Meet Again

Now we launch our ship upon the wave;
Thru the dark, Life's storms we'll ever brave:
Though today from friends we'll part,
Life anew for us is starting:
With a smile we'll sail the troubled seas,
But you'll linger in our memories,
Dear Greenfield High, to you, farewell,
Till we meet again.

Long shall we your inspiration keep
Till at last, life's harvest we shall reap:
Thru the years you've paved our way,
Lending wisdom, valor, faith:
In work and play our hearts were ever true
Now in homage we must bid adieu.
Dear Greenfield High, to you, farewell,
Till we meet again.
